

Research Papers Introduction

The Hannah Dairy Research Foundation has started this new initiative to provide summaries of research papers which we think will be of interest to progressive farmers and consultants.

There will be approximately one a month, these are written by Hannah Dairy Research Foundation Associates and then sent to the corresponding author of the paper to check for accuracy and suggest any changes. The summaries are based on information provided by researchers and publication of the summaries does not mean that the Hannah Dairy Research Foundation endorses any products or particular farming systems.

The reference to original paper will also be given at end of each summary, a useful way to find on-line link to the paper is by using Google Scholar <https://scholar.google.com/>. Some papers are open access other may be restricted and a fee is payable.

If any researchers want one of their papers to be considered for publication then please email enquiry@hannahdairyresearch.org.uk

The same email can be used by farmers and consultants if there is a paper or subject area they would like HDRF to consider.
